Health is Wealth

Keeping healthy is affordable with Medi-Cal

BY ANNE STOKES

No doubt; health care can be expensive. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the nation spends $3.8 trillion on health care costs, 90% of which is spent on chronic conditions and mental health care.

Heart disease, stroke, cancer, diabetes, arthritis and obesity are the most common and costly health problems, as well as some of the most preventable and responsive to treatment and management, especially if caught early. They're also the nation's leading causes of death and disability. Preventative care such as routine doctor visits, screenings and prescription medications save lives and trillions of dollars.

The key to prevention is health insurance coverage. While most Americans are covered under workplace plans, many have jobs that don't offer benefits or policies are too expensive. That doesn't mean they have to go without lifesaving health care. Medi-Cal offers individuals and families plans that fit their needs and budgets.

"Medi-Cal is California's version of the (federal) Medicaid program and it offers no-cost and low-cost coverage to eligible people who live in California," says Lillian Hernandez, Eligibility Worker with Fresno County's Outreach Unit. "Health coverage is important, and it can become costly depending on what services you may need, but Medi-Cal can help cover those costs."

Under Medi-Cal, preventative care and emergency services are covered, as are primary care and specialist providers, prescriptions, dental, vision, mental health care and more.

Premium costs are determined based on income levels. Clients have different policies to choose from and patients can select from thousands of health care providers in Fresno County that accept Medi-Cal insurance plans. Applications can be submitted online, over the phone, or in person by completing a paper application and dropping it off at one of Fresno County's Department of Social Services office locations.

"The requirements for Medi-Cal are based on your household's income and whether you are a resident of California," Hernandez explains. "Anyone can apply for Medi-Cal and potentially be eligible, including single adults with no children, or even disabled older persons."

"Not having children in the home should not deter you from applying for benefits if you think you're eligible," she adds. "If you are an immigrant, that should not stop you from applying for Medi-Cal. Immigrants of various statuses are eligible for a range of services — whether undocumented, a DACA recipient, a naturalized citizen, employment-authorized, or LPR (Lawful Permanent Resident), an individual could potentially be eligible for Medi-Cal."

To apply for Medi-Cal online, visit www.mybenefitscalwin.org or call Fresno County's Medi-Cal Outreach Hotline at 559-600-7998.

MANAGED CARE PLANS

Once approved, many Medi-Cal recipients must enroll in a Managed Care Plan. Managed Care Plans are healthcare providers contracted with the State of California to administer billing and payment for Medi-Cal services.

Fresno County Medi-Cal recipients can choose from two different providers:

- ▶ Anthem Blue Cross
- ▶ CalViva

Plans can be chosen by calling and speaking with a Managed Care representative over the phone, or by visiting in person at one of the DSS lobby locations. It is important to note that if a plan is not chosen within 30 days of Medi-Cal approval, one will be selected on behalf of the recipient.

Once enrolled in a plan, recipients are then able to select a Primary Care Physician. A second health insurance card will also be sent out from the chosen provider.

Primary care physicians can refer patients to specialists or other care providers as needed. Similar to HMOs, physicians need to accept the plan and Medi-Cal for services to be covered. To help choose, recipients will receive booklets outlining plan details and lists of care providers.

To see the list of providers that accept Medi-Cal in Fresno County, visit www.dhcs.ca.gov and search for "Medi-Cal Managed Care Health Plan Directory."

Medi-Cal: Apply Today!

Fresno County can help you connect to Medi-Cal benefits

BY GAIL ALLYN SHORT

Lindsay Harris, Fresno County Outreach Social Services Program Supervisor, says those hesitating to apply for Medi-Cal could be missing out.

"I always recommend to anyone having trouble affording health care costs, just go ahead and apply. I don't want anyone to rule themselves out without applying first, because you just never know," Harris says.

Applying for Medi-Cal — California's version of the federal Medicaid health insurance program — is quick and easy. Fresno County residents can go online at MyBenefitsCalwin.org and complete an application in as little as 10 minutes, Harris says. Residents can also pick up a paper application at the social services office or regional center in their area, or make a request to have an application mailed to their home.

Afterward, residents can send in their completed applications using the postage-paid envelope provided or drop them off at their nearest social services office or regional center. Aside from the department's central office located on Peach and Dakota in Clovis, DSS has regional offices in West Fresno, Kerman, Reedley, Selma and Coalinga. These offices also have drop boxes where people can conveniently deposit their paperwork anytime.

And for anyone who needs help filling out an application, Harris says help is just a phone call away. "We have our new Medi-Cal Outreach Hotline where we can help Fresno County residents apply for Medi-Cal over the phone," she says.

Those who would like to apply for Medi-Cal can call 559-600-7998 and leave their name and phone number. An Outreach Eligibility Worker will return their call within 24 hours to assist. It's important to note that once an application is received, county workers may need to contact the applicant to request additional documents or information such as proof of household's income, or proof of identification.

"You could miss out on getting the assistance you're eligible for."

Lindsay Harris
Social Services Program Supervisor, Fresno County
Department of Social Services, Outreach Unit

"We use a lot of different factors to determine eligibility," Harris says. "So if you have income, we can sometimes verify it through our own systems and processes."

"However, if we are not able to verify income through our own sources, then that's when we would need to reach out to the applicant and request that verification," she adds. "For this reason, I suggest to those applying that they include all available verifications along with their application."

Applicants who are pregnant, blind or disabled are encouraged to apply for Medi-

Cal. It's important to note that processing a Medi-Cal application can take up to 45 days; however, the speed of the process depends on how quickly applicants provide all the necessary documents and information, Harris says.

Upon approval of their Medi-Cal benefits, first-time recipients will receive their Medi-Cal Benefits Identification Card, often referred to as their BIC, in the mail within just a few days.

The bottom line, says Harris: Apply for Medi-Cal. "Otherwise, you could miss out on getting the assistance you're eligible for."

Lindsay Harris urges Fresno County residents in need to apply for benefits.

HELP FOR SENIORS

For seniors or those who qualify, financial assistance is available under the federal Medicare Savings Program, which can help with Medicare premiums for Part A, Part B, deductibles, coinsurance or co-payments. Recipients can request this assistance even if they don't have Medi-Cal.

What You Need, When You Need it

Medi-Cal provides for emergencies and routine care

BY ANNE STOKES

From head to toe, Medi-Cal helps keep you and your family healthy. Whether it's for routine check-ups, emergency room visits or surgery, its low- or no-cost coverage ensures you're able to get the medical care you need when you need it.

"Through the program, you can get an array of services," explains Lillian Hernandez, Eligibility Worker with Fresno County's Outreach Unit. "Certain things that are medically necessary (can) be completely covered by Medi-Cal. In addition to emergency care, Medi-Cal also covers preventative care, which is very important."

Preventative care, routine screenings and management of chronic conditions ensure people are able to get the medical care they need before conditions become serious and more costly. For example, controlling heart disease with diet and medication can help prevent a heart attack or stroke. Without health insurance, patients' only option is often the emergency room.

"All that out-of-pocket cost that comes with a visit to the ER can really cause a hardship for any household. Health coverage could help reduce medical care costs, or potentially cover most expenses altogether," Hernandez says. "Individuals and families are running the risk of not accessing the care they need, which is why preventative care is so important for everyone to have. You're running the risk of not taking care of what needs to be taken care of for yourself and for your family."

In addition to preventive care and emergency room visits, Medi-Cal covers a wide range of needs, including: prescription drugs; medical equipment; physical, verbal and occupational therapy; maternity care; family planning; and — for qualifying clients — vision and dental care. Through Medi-Cal, patients also can access mental health care and substance abuse treatment, including inpatient and outpatient programs.

"It's important to be able to access affordable mental health services for yourself and for your family," Hernandez says. "It's something that's still kind of a taboo topic, people are still a little apprehensive speaking about it, but it's something that needs to be at the forefront of services being offered."

"Medi-Cal also can cover services through residential treatment facilities for drug and alcohol abuse. Some of those facilities incorporate mental health care, prescription drugs and doctor visits," she adds. "Whatever they need — it is a case-by-case basis — if you go to a facility that accepts Medi-Cal, your treatment can be covered."

"In addition to emergency care, Medi-Cal also covers preventative care, which is very important."

Who can get Medi-Cal?

MINOR CONSENT PROGRAM: HELPING KIDS AND TEENS COPE

Children and teens could be experiencing challenges such as mental health issues, sexual abuse, substance abuse, or are in need of family planning or pregnancy-related services. Often when encountering these barriers, children and teens are unable to confide in the parents or guardians in their lives. Sadly, failing to get help for such conditions can lead to more dangerous health outcomes or tragedy.

To help, the Minor Consent Medi-Cal Program offers eligible children and teens free and confidential care for these special circumstances.

Allowable services for minors under age 12 include:

- ▶ Pregnancy and pregnancy-related services
- ▶ Family planning services
- ▶ Sexual assault services

Minors ages 12 to 20 can access the above services as well as:

- ▶ Sexually transmitted diseases treatment
- ▶ Drug and alcohol abuse treatment and counseling
- ▶ Outpatient mental health treatment and counseling

Those in need of services can confidentially apply for the program over the phone by calling the Minor Consent Hotline at 559-600-9799. The County will never call, send mail to the home or ask for a social security number.

More people qualify than you might think

BY GAIL ALLYN SHORT

About 10 years ago, Himena Jimenez was a single woman in her early 40s, working seasonal jobs wherever she could.

But the Fresno County resident says she suffered from diabetes and had no health insurance. Consequently, she often lacked money for her medications.

Her sister told her about Medi-Cal, California's version of the federal Medicaid health insurance program. But Jimenez believed that the program had too many requirements, that applicants had to earn a certain amount of money to qualify and that her undocumented status made her ineligible for coverage.

"But her sister encouraged her to apply anyway," says Isabel Rodriguez, Eligibility Worker with Fresno County's Outreach Unit, translating for Jimenez. "And she did."

Many people have misconceptions about Medi-Cal, Rodriguez says.

Some view Medi-Cal as a handout, but many working and retired adults, including those with Medicare health insurance, can qualify for the Medi-Cal program.

"I encourage people to apply for Medi-Cal," says Rodriguez. "If they're eligible for it, they'll receive it. It's a safety net for you whenever you need to go to the doctor."

"It's health insurance. It's better to have it than to get sick and worry about not having health insurance once you're in that situation," she adds.

Unfortunately, sometimes misinformation about Medi-Cal comes from well-meaning friends and family members, Rodriguez says.

"People share information about their situations, such as, 'I make this much money, and didn't qualify for Medi-Cal.' So other people assume they won't qualify for Medi-Cal either."

"But making assumptions about who qualifies for Medi-Cal is one of the biggest mistakes that people make," she says.

When Jimenez applied for Medi-Cal, she discovered that the process was easier than she thought.

"She says that when she applied, she filled out her application in our office where she got the help she needed to complete the form," Rodriguez says.

One fact people may be unaware of is that young people under age 26, whether undocumented or not, and undocumented adults age 50 and older can be eligible for the full range of Medi-Cal services.

Those who are unqualified for full-scope coverage can still be eligible for restricted-scope coverage for pregnancy-related conditions, medical emergencies and long-term care.

Fresno County's eligibility staff will never share one's immigration status with anyone, Rodriguez says.

"Their immigration status is confidential," she says. "The only reason we ask for that is so we can determine whether you're eligible for the full-scope medical coverage or the restricted coverage."

Today, Jimenez spends most of her days taking care of her four grandchildren, she says.

"She says Medi-Cal helps cover all of her medicines, her doctor appointments and appointments for the kids," Rodriguez says. "Medi-Cal has helped her a lot."

"Making assumptions about who qualifies for Medi-Cal is one of the biggest mistakes that people make."

Emergency help within reach

Family gets assistance after child's illness – and health coverage, too

BY EDGAR SANCHEZ

A $1,200 bill for a little one's health exam can be shocking – especially for a working-class family without medical insurance.

That's what happened to Teddy P., of Fresno, who was billed that amount after he took his 2-year-old son to Valley Children's Hospital in Madera with a high temperature and a mouth infection.

"I wanted a doctor to look at my son, because I didn't know what he had," says Teddy, 33. "We were in the ER for three or four hours until a doctor examined him, and (the doctor) said it was just a fever and gave him some Tylenol."

Relieved his son was not hospitalized, Teddy was shocked by the ER bill. Lacking medical insurance, Teddy and his wife Katie reached out to Medi-Cal for help – and it came through.

"Medi-Cal is awesome," says Teddy. "It really helps people who can't afford coverage on their own."

"Medi-Cal is awesome. It really helps people who can't afford coverage on their own."

Teddy P.
Medi-Cal recipient

Teddy's family lost their health insurance in mid-2020, when he was laid off from his job as a salesman. He then became an independent commercial/residential solar consultant.

"I am not low income. I am middle class," says Teddy, describing his budget as tight.

His wife Katie, a housekeeper, sells Scentsy fragrances part time. Neither her job nor her husband's has health benefits.

In late May, their 2-year-old son developed a bad fever.

"He's an energetic boy," Teddy says of the youngster. "Normally, he likes to run around chasing his two older brothers. He laughs. He also dances to Lecrae's hip-hop music."

But suddenly, the rambunctious tyke seemed "lifeless." Showing no improvement after nine days, his dad took him to Valley Children's. Using a credit card, Teddy paid the hospital $400. Teddy was then billed another $800 by the ER doctor for that single visit. That was the doctor's share.

The unexpected $1,200 debt burdened the couple. They applied online for Medi-Cal assistance in July, at a time when COVID had squashed Katie's fragrance sales.

The family qualified for retroactive Medi-Cal coverage, triggering a full $400 refund to Teddy from the hospital. Medi-Cal also paid the doctor's $800 fee, before it was due. The family also met guidelines for subsidized health care. The children — including the fully recovered 2-year-old — are insured through Medi-Cal for Families, for a monthly $13 premium each. Their parents obtained insurance through Covered California, the state's health insurance marketplace, saving them a combined $450 a month.

"We were blessed to be approved," Teddy says.

REACHING RURAL RESIDENTS

Enrolling all eligible local residents in Medi-Cal is the goal of the Fresno County Department of Social Services (DSS).

To achieve that, DSS has partnered with nonprofits, churches and other organizations to host Medi-Cal enrollment events, particularly in rural areas.

"We've been on a roll, visiting rural towns like Mendota, Firebaugh, Huron, Sanger, Parlier, Auberry and many others," says Raul Uriarte, Jr., Eligibility Worker, Fresno County DSS Outreach Unit.

Rural residents often lack transportation, a barrier to visiting DSS offices, Uriarte says. "(So) we take our resources on the road – laptops, applications, resource flyers and, of course, tables, canopies and chairs. We average about three events a week, sometimes more."

MANAGING YOUR PREGNANCY

Having access to an OB-GYN and other health care providers is important for maintaining a healthy pregnancy.

But without health insurance, the costs for check-ups, routine tests and birth and delivery in a hospital can mean paying thousands of dollars out of pocket.

In Fresno County, however, low-income pregnant women can access no- and low-cost health insurance through the Medi-Cal Managed Care program.

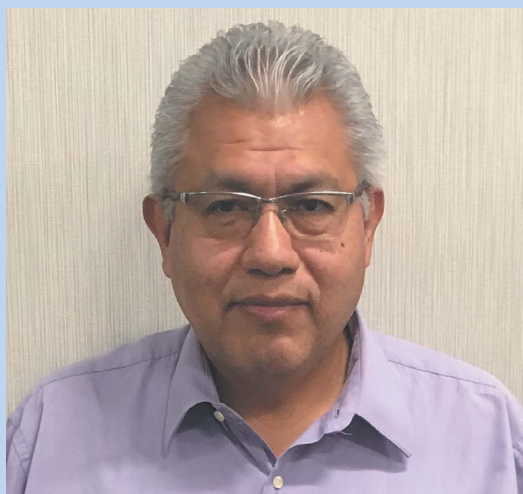

The program is made possible through a partnership with Anthem Blue Cross Partnership Plan and CalViva Health, both of which offer managed care plans that include services for pregnant women and their babies.

"They will cover the routine visits, so pregnant women can see their doctor and have delivery and initial postpartum coverage," explains Jose Corchado, Social Services Program Supervisor with Fresno County Department of Social Services.

Through Medi-Cal Managed Care, expectant mothers and babies can access services such as:

- ▶ Doctor visits
- ▶ Prenatal care
- ▶ Prescriptions
- ▶ Hospital care
- ▶ Newborn care
- ▶ Check-ups and immunizations for children

To learn more, visit www.healthcareoptions.dhcs.ca.gov or call Health Care Options directly, at 1-800-430-4263 (English) or 1-800-430-3003 (Spanish).

Making a difference

Insurance helps mothers and babies stay healthy

BY GAIL ALLYN SHORT

Five years ago, Bonnie Sinclair was an unmarried mother of a teenager and working as a caregiver when she learned she was pregnant.

The news came, however, at a time when she did not have health insurance.

"Being pregnant, I needed medical care, but in my financial situation, I couldn't afford anything," she says.

Fortunately, Sinclair's insurance agent told her about Medi-Cal for low-income individuals and families and encouraged her to apply for the program.

"She figured things out based on my income," says Sinclair. "She took my information and said, 'This is what you qualify for.'"

Once Medi-Cal accepted her application, Sinclair was able to select a managed care plan under Anthem Blue Cross, which paid for her prenatal care to keep her and her baby healthy during her pregnancy.

"I got to have regular visits with the OB-GYN who took care of me throughout my pregnancy. I had blood tests, ultrasounds and medications as needed," she says. "I was grateful to have the insurance because I was able to take care of myself and baby throughout."

Sinclair gave birth to a healthy baby girl, Isla, on March 16, 2016, at Clovis Community Medical Center. But even before Isla's birth, Sinclair took steps to make sure Isla would be covered under Medi-Cal after she was born.

"After the birth, Isla was able to get her regular check-ups and her vaccinations, and we've continued to see the same physician that she has seen since she was born," says Sinclair. "And for months afterward, they cared for me and made sure that everything looked normal."

"Without Medi-Cal, I wouldn't have been able to see the baby and listen to her heartbeat on a regular basis with the ultrasound," she adds. "Going to the hospital would have been financially devastating, and obviously getting her care would also have been a financial impossibility."

Today, Sinclair is married to her husband, Byron, and Isla is in kindergarten. And with Medi-Cal, the family has the health insurance needed to keep Isla healthy, she says.

"When I need medical care for her, I can take her without having to pay some extreme copay. I can take her to get her regular vaccinations and her flu shot, and I can't wait for the COVID vaccine to be approved for her."

"We all deserve to be cared for and to live healthy lives and have access to health care," Sinclair says. "So if you can get Medi-Cal, get it."

"We all deserve to be cared for and to live healthy lives and have access to health care."
