CROSSING THE LINE

Crossline Community Church
both challenges and supports

BY EVAN TUCHINSKY

Just over 10 years ago, while speaking at a Christian men's retreat in the San Bernardino Mountains, Pastor JP Jones pulled out a piece of rope, challenging the attendees to "cross the line" and give their lives to Christ.

That metaphor — that moment — became the catalyst for the formation of Crossline Community Church. Located in Laguna Hills, Crossline is a no-fear, no-holds-barred community of believers who are both friendly and fiercely passionate about God.

Church life here is about Jesus, not dogma. It's about helping people become whole, healthy, strong. And it's about meeting them — you — at any point along life's spiritual journey.

Crossline's motto is, "Love God, love people and have a blast!" It's a place where you can be yourself and feel welcome no matter your age, life-stage or background.

"The 'feel factor' is very significant to us," says Pastor Jones, the church's senior pastor. "When people come onto our campus, they feel loved, they feel accepted, they feel empowered and they feel challenged to really consider what it would mean to follow Christ."

Crossline was born in 2004 when Pastor Jones convened 15 other believers in a living room. Their home Bible study soon doubled in size, then tripled, then quadrupled. The congregation began conducting Sunday services at Capistrano Valley High School, which it did for five years. Then, nearly five years ago, Crossline transitioned to its own facility at the current location, a 30-acre property at 23331 Moulton Parkway. Crossline is now a faith community of more than 2,000.

Crossline members not only attend services but also participate in ministries, groups, classes and missions. The church has programs for recovery as well as charitable outreach.

With Crossline's origins tracing to a men's retreat, ensuring that men set a spiritual example remains a key component of the ministry. Church leaders describe the atmosphere as "testosterone-friendly," a church where men feel just as comfortable attending as their wives do.

"We really try to engage men and help men become servant-leaders," Pastor Jones says. "The goal isn't to become a Rambo for Jesus. It's total life discipleship in following Christ in every area."

Crossline is a place for real people. Relatable life lessons with examples from sports and pop culture are integrated into services. There's no formal dress code; in fact, Pastor Jones' Sunday attire tends to consist of jeans and a button-down shirt.

"We invite people to come here as seekers and we'll meet them right where they are," Pastor Jones says, "but we encourage them to actually be seeking and at some point to consider crossing the line and giving their life to Christ."

WHAT IS CROSSLINE?

Crossline is a joyful, God-centered community where everyone is welcome. A place to go for wisdom, inspiration and encouragement. A place for making connections with wholehearted believers who will support you wherever you are on your spiritual journey. The friendly, family-oriented atmosphere offers the ideal setting for worshipping, living and sharing the gospel. Stop by this Sunday to find out for yourself what makes Crossline so amazing.

THE STORY OF CROSSLINE

SEPT. 28, 2004

Senior Pastor JP Jones, Executive Pastor Greg Munck and Children's Pastor Dean "Dean-o" Lies feel inspired to bring the power and energy of a men's retreat to the weekly church experience. They meet at Taco Mesa in Ladera Ranch to discuss the possibility of starting a church.

OCT. 4, 2004

A small group of core people gather at the home of Greg and Sandy Sizemore to pray for God's guidance in planting a new church. The name Crossline Community Church is born after Jones stretches out a rope at a men's retreat, asking men in attendance to cross and make a commitment to God.

NOV. 2004

The core group begins meeting weekly at the Sizemore home for prayer and vision while developing the mission and values of Crossline. The first offerings start coming in and Dean-o Lies becomes the first full-time staff person.

JAN. 1, 2005

In a leap of faith, JP Jones and Greg Munck leave their jobs and officially begin working full time as staff to prepare for the church's launch in February 2005. They only have enough money to cover a couple of months of operation.

JAN. 21, 2005

The entire budget for the first year of the church is raised in a single night at a private fundraising event.

FEB. 14, 2010

Crossline marks its five-year anniversary and its first Sunday service at a new permanent location, a 30-acre church campus in Laguna Hills that Crossline was invited to take over from the Lake Hills Community Church congregation. More than 1,500 attend.

TODAY

Crossline continues to grow and increase its outreach and influence in the community.

Senior Pastor JP Jones helped found Crossline Community Church in Laguna Hills about 10 years ago. Today, the church is a thriving community of passionate believers who are free to be themselves.

NEW BELIEVER GETS SUPPORT

At Crossline, no one goes through life alone

BY BRITTANY WESELY

Though Fred Sedighraves was raised in a Muslim household, he never really subscribed to any religious doctrine aside from his belief in a higher being. Shortly after Fred graduated high school, his father, the sole source of income for the family, unexpectedly left. Fred's rocky thrust into adulthood — struggling to financially support his family while attempting to perform well in school — caused him to doubt the idea of God.

Years later, Fred's new girlfriend, Jahana — who had already been attending and working in childcare at Crossline — invited Fred to go to church with her.

parents. While Fred was learning to navigate his new roles as husband and father, he was wrangling his real estate business through the market crash. Fred hit wall after wall that he didn't know how to break through. The strife he experienced caused his relationship with Jahana to suffer.

"I felt very separated from my husband," Jahana says. "I felt like we were living as roommates. We thought about walking away from the marriage."

Unsure how to help her husband, Jahana recommended that Fred call one of the pastors at Crossline. He met with a pastor a few days later.

"At that point I was just hoping for other men and know that they won't judge me," Fred says.

Members of the group invited Fred to go on a retreat in Southern California with more than 300 other Crossline men. The retreat, Fred says, was transformative. And when the pastor presented the opportunity to anyone who wanted to accept Jesus, Fred had no hesitations. The pastor laid a large rope across the stage, and Fred "crossed the line" with about 20 other men that night.

"When I surrendered, all of my issues, pain and unanswered questions were gone," Fred says. "It was like a massive weight lifted off my shoulders."

Fred's newfound faith immediately adjusted his outlook on life and helped repair his relationship with Jahana.

"In our marriage now we are both equally yoked as believers — one flesh," Jahana says. "We're realizing what marriage is really meant to be."

Crossline has been a comfortable place for the couple to grow together in their faith — offering support after Fred became a new believer, and connecting them both with resources to sustain them throughout their family's spiritual journey.

"[At Crossline] they preach, they teach and they provide," Fred says. "There is not a single aspect of my life that I can't get support from Crossline."

Crossline's outreach to Haiti began after a catastrophic magnitude 7.0 earthquake devastated the country. Crossline teams visit several times a year to provide humanitarian aid and share the message of Christ.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE IN HAITI

Crossline inspires man to get involved in mission service

BY MIKE BLOUNT

When Tim Lam went to Haiti for the first time on a men's outreach trip with Crossline Community Church, it broke his heart. He saw children with no clothes. He saw prostitutes. He saw trash filling the gutters along the streets. It was the first time he had ever been outside of the United States except for a trip to Mexico, but he was so moved by the experience he knew he would be coming back. Lam says he felt called by God to help the people of Haiti.

"There was a whole range of emotions that I felt," Lam says. "Because it was my first time, there was awe and interest. But then you see how people are living. They're basically living in their trash. They don't have electricity. There's no bathrooms."

Crossline's outreach to Haiti began after a catastrophic magnitude 7.0 earthquake devastated the country, affecting an estimated 3 million people. Men from Crossline quickly organized a trip to Port au Prince to provide aid.

Partnering with local and international organizations to found the Chanje Movement, Crossline helped establish a children's shelter by renting, staffing and furnishing it. The church prevented another shelter from closing and provided resources for a third, which it continues to support.

Executive Pastor Greg Munck says Crossline is always trying to keep the congregation involved in the church's global outreach efforts through media projects. Lam was moved to go to Haiti after watching a video put together by Dave Brodsky and Rick Braeutigam for a Sunday service. Both have traveled to Haiti more than 20 times in the last five years.

Church members who can't physically go on a mission trip to Haiti can sponsor another's trip or donate clothes to be given to those in need. The mission to Haiti is just one of Crossline's ventures committed to local and global service.

"It's part of the fabric of who we are," Munck says. "We do this because it's how we fulfill the great commission — sharing the Gospel — which God commands us to do."

Though much of the damage from the earthquake has been repaired since it occurred, there is still a lot of work to do.

On a recent trip, Lam says volunteers built an awning for shade for one of the children's shelters. They handed out food to 500 people at a park and visited a prison to share the message of Christ with inmates. Through Chanje's micro-credit lending program, they provided small loans to qualified Haitian applicants and taught locals how to be more effective in business.

Meeting children who were living in abject poverty was especially moving for Lam. Despite the conditions, they are hopeful and happy.

"There was a girl I met who just wanted to be held," Lam says. "I held her for two hours, and when I had to go, she asked me, 'Can you take me home with you?' It just breaks your heart seeing what they are living in, and you want to help them in any way you can."

By being able to see the difference Crossline is making, Lam says his two trips to Haiti have been life-changing.

"We are called on by Jesus to spread his word," Lam says. "We're helping them both spiritually and financially. We're bringing them hope and helping with their immediate needs."

"IT JUST BREAKS YOUR HEART SEEING WHAT THEY ARE LIVING IN, AND YOU WANT TO HELP THEM IN ANY WAY YOU CAN."

HELPING THOSE IN NEED

COMMUNITY OUTREACH

- CELEBRATE RECOVERY: Connect with people who have similar hurts, hang-ups and habits at these recovery groups.
- FOOD PANTRY: In a partnership with Second Harvest Food Bank, Crossline provides canned goods, frozen dinners, fresh produce, chicken, beef, steak and turkeys to 2,000 people a month. It also provides toiletries, such as shampoo and toothpaste.
- WOMEN'S SHELTER: Once a month, women of Crossline go to a women's shelter to serve a meal to homeless single mothers and their children. They also teach life skills, such as creating a résumé, parenting and how to interview for a job.
- MOTEL CHURCH: Members of Crossline set up a church in the parking lot of the Covered Wagon Motel to serve hot meals and share the Gospel on the last Sunday of every month.
- CHRISTMAS PARTY: On December 21, 2014 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Crossline will host a Christmas party for families who receive food from its food pantry.

GLOBAL MISSION WORK

- MISSIONSRACE: Crossline hosts the OC MissionsRace, a 5K event for churches, ministries and other nonprofit, faith-based charities in Southern California. The purpose is to bring together these different organizations to help raise funds supporting their work. For more information, visit missionsrace.org.
- HAITI: Since the devastating 7.0 earthquake in 2010, Crossline has partnered with the Chanje Movement in Port au Prince. Crossline funds three shelters of rescued children through participation in child sponsorship programs. Crossline also sends teams several times each year with Missions Director Dave Brodsky to work with children, train Haitian pastors and help community leaders, business people, families and those in convalescent care and in prison.
- MEXICO: Crossline partners with Hands of Mercy to join local pastors and churches in the Ensenada area to build homes for those in need. Hands of Mercy has built more than one thousand homes over the past decade and Crossline has sent teams to build over a dozen of them.
- ISRAEL: For years, Crossline has joined with The Global Mission in working with Jewish, Arab and Christian leaders in Israel, helping those in need and sharing the Gospel.
- AFRICA: Crossline is a founding supporter of Y-Malawi?, a partnership between six organizations in Malawi, Africa that help rural village communities with clean water, food security, AIDS/HIV health care, child sponsorship, micro-enterprise, education, pastoral training and outreach.

BUILDING BETTER MEN

Man empowered
to become leader

become a leader.

PEOPLE

Four years ago, Jason Park was what he calls "a casual Christian." He would come to Sunday service, but when life got busy, he chose to skip it. He wasn't actively involved in the church. He never shared the Gospel with others. He was not engaged with his family at home. Today, the 49-year-old says he is empowered to be a better servant of Christ and a leader in the community because the men at Crossline Community Church have built him up.

"Before I made the decision to get involved at Crossline, I was really lacking in my commitment at home," Park says. "I think I was being selfish by putting my own needs before my family. I wasn't paying attention to my wife and children, and I wasn't protecting them like I should."

At the time, Park's two daughters were teenagers and he was having problems communicating with them. He was impatient. He found it difficult to relate to them. Park knew he needed to change to become a better father.

The turning point came in 2010, when Park decided to attend the men's group First Call. The group brings men together from all walks of life to study the Bible and bond with one another. As he became more involved in the church and started regularly attending men's small groups, he found strength in the friendships he made. He also began to look to the men of Crossline for guidance and support.

"You have men around you who are positive and they want to support you," Park says. "They are there for you when you need it and provide encouragement and prayer. I needed them to hold me accountable as a father, husband and a Christian."

Park says he learned a lot about himself and his relationships with his family by talking with other men who have faced similar challenges in their lives. Through their guidance, he now has a better relationship with his wife and two daughters.

"I realized I wasn't seeing life through their eyes, and when we lack the appropriate patience and grace, it leads to problems in the home," Park says.

Being a part of the men's group has also given Park the confidence to become a leader in the community and church. He occasionally leads men's small groups and has become much more active in sharing his faith with others in the community.

"Slowly over time, [the men at Crossline] have built me up to teach the word of God appropriately and provided me with leadership opportunities," Park says. "I am thankful for them and I hope they continue to mentor me in ways I really appreciate."

EVERYONE IS WELCOME

The first thing you'll see when you come to a service at Crossline are the smiling faces of the Guest Services team in the parking lot, on the patio and at the doors of the Worship Center. Members of the team help make Crossline a friendly and inviting place for guests and new members. Made up of 85 volunteer members, they assist with seating, provide coffee and doughnuts, direct people to the restroom and answer any questions they have.

If you're new to Crossline, they are a great resource, according to Guest Services head Bill LaBruna. Along with his wife, Bradleigh, LaBruna has been a part of the team for seven years.

"We generally try to lend a hand and help in any way we can," LaBruna says. "When you come on campus, you can feel a difference. That's what attracted my wife and I to Crossline in 2006. It really feels like a family."

Andrea Cooney and her husband, Aaron, are confident that Crossline Community Church provides a solid spiritual foundation for their three children, Ethan, Grace and Shelby.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Crossline Church teams up with parents to help children discover a fulfilling relationship with Christ and lasting friendships with discipleship-focused peers. With its weekly programs, special events and multimedia tools, Crossline prepares youth with a solid biblical foundation to aid them throughout their spiritual journey.

Dean-o Lies leads Prime Time, a midweek gathering of third- to fifth-grade kids.

One of the scariest things about being a parent is trying to prepare children for life as adults. Crossline Community Church offers resources and support so that parents can feel confident with the guidance their children have received, and children — having their parents' trust — can exercise their independence.

Crossline's weekly programs feature age-appropriate lessons, live music, and creative media — such as teaching videos and an online interactive Bible adventure called "Dean-o REPLAY," created by Children and Family Pastor Dean-o Lies.

Crossline member and mother of three Andrea Cooney says Crossline really goes the extra mile to keep youth returning every week.

Cooney's children often saw Lies perform with his touring band, Dean-o and the Dynamos, at their private Christian school. And many of their friends who attend Crossline encouraged them to visit the church. After attending their first service in March 2014, the Cooney children were hooked.

"They felt like they had always been there," Cooney says. "They want to keep coming back."

Cooney says Crossline provides her and her husband with many resources as parents. Each week, all lessons at every grade level are based on the same verses, with age-appropriate interpretations. That makes it easy for Cooney to expand on the lessons at home with the whole family.

Parental participation is essential for the program's success, Lies says. Crossline offers parents education at periodic Christian parenting courses. And both mothers and fathers are encouraged to get involved by leading a youth small group or working in childcare.

"The big struggle out there is to have male leadership in addition to female leadership in the children's services," Lies says. "The biggest challenge is reaching the oldest boy in the room. To have a male pastor on staff who is leading and who can directly teach junior ages — that makes our ministry unique."

Since her family began attending Crossline, Cooney says all of her children are actively engaged in and are fiercely passionate about spreading God's word. She says whenever they see a person who is homeless, they ask to pack lunches stuffed with sandwiches and encouraging Bible verses.

"They're just thinking about themselves much less. And they are so innocent, they don't have that filter," Cooney says. "They just want to share Christ with everyone."

Crossline children's services ignited such passion in her two oldest children — Ethan, 9, and Grace, 8 — that they decided to get baptized this summer. When Ethan and Grace first mentioned the idea, Cooney was unsure if her children understood the significance of getting baptized. When her daughter told her, "Jesus Christ is my savior forever and I want to show everyone," Cooney knew they were ready.

Cooney is confident that Crossline is building a solid spiritual foundation for her children. She said she is happy that Crossline's youth programs have many attendees — providing the opportunity for her children to form a network of supportive Christian friends.

"This place is it for us. We're not leaving," Cooney says. "We're not going anywhere else."

BETTER TOGETHER

"When the perspective of the world seems so loud, or our circumstances seem so big, [small groups] provide someone there to encourage you that God's love and strength make a big difference." — Lori Marshall, director of adult ministries and care

Spiritual life is not meant to be lived alone. Crossline offers a place for everyone at every life stage to engage in authentic and encouraging conversation. With more than 50 small groups, there are many opportunities to form lasting relationships with fellow Christians. Some of the ways to get involved include:

WOMEN'S GROUPS

Connect with friendly women who will encourage you in your relationship with God through Bible study, prayer and special events.

MEN'S GROUPS

The men of Crossline look to connect and challenge each other through weekly Bible studies/small groups, monthly events, outreaches and various serving opportunities.

COMMUNITY GROUPS

Join people from similar walks of life for weekly, intimate meetings in homes throughout the community.

MOTHERS OF PRESCHOOLERS (MOPS)

Get mothering support, find spiritual encouragement and form uplifting friendships with mothers of 0- to 6-year-olds.

For more information about small groups, contact Lori Marshall, director of adult ministries, at 949-916-0250 ex. 119.

ENCOURAGING EACH OTHER

Grieving parents find strength from small groups BY BRITTANY WESELY

When Gigi Johnson was 10 weeks pregnant, she discovered she'd had a miscarriage. As she and her husband struggled with the news, Johnson ached for the support of her small group. The weekly meeting was scheduled for that night, and for Johnson, it couldn't arrive soon enough.

"When [the group members] saw my face and my husband's face, they knew we were going through something tough," Johnson says. "We shared what was going on. Then they dropped everything and put their arms around us."

Johnson and her husband were overwhelmed by the support from their small group friends. They received flowers and meals, sympathy and prayers. As they coped with the loss of their unborn child in the weeks that followed, the offerings of encouragement they received were strengthening.

"They knew our hearts were breaking and that broke their hearts, too," Johnson says. "It was really reassuring. We knew they cared."

The couple began attending the married couples small group at Crossline Community Church four years ago. When the group first formed, all its members were of the same age and in similar stages in their relationships. That initial year, they were timid. Just getting to know one another. In the years that followed, their faith and relationships strengthened as they experienced their lives together. They supported each other through infertility, pregnancy, adoption and loss.

Since she first started attending Crossline seven years ago, Johnson has gotten involved in many different small groups. Now she leads a small group for ninth-grade girls and is the coordinator of Mothers of Preschoolers (MOPS), a weekly support group for mothers of children ages 0 to 6 years.

"We're just doing life together as moms. Not judging each other. Not comparing," Johnson says. "I don't know how mothers get through life without a community like this."

This year MOPS has a new theme: "Be you, bravely." Johnson says the theme encourages mothers to step out of their comfort zones and do what the Lord has put in their hearts to do.

"It's so easy as moms to feel like everyone needs something from us and we have to say yes to everything," Johnson says. "[The new theme] is about how God has a specific purpose for us, and he wants us to be who we are as boldly and bravely as we can."

Recently a mother discovered the MOPS group online and contacted Johnson about participating. The mother was thrilled to have found such a group and said, "This is just everything I have been looking for for the last two years and didn't know existed." Johnson says this is a reaction she hears often.

"I would absolutely recommend that anyone get involved in a small group," Johnson says. "I personally feel like it just makes your walk with the Lord that much more tangible."

ARE YOU READY TO CROSS THE LINE?

On paper, many churches seem the same. They're guided by similar values and goals — preaching the Gospel, touching lives, embracing differences.

What makes Crossline Community Church different — distinctive — cannot be conveyed by words alone.

It must be experienced.

Visit the campus to experience this community defined by love, caring and acceptance. Attend a service to experience the pastors' candid, affirming messages — blending biblical truths with their own real, relevant life lessons — along with high-energy praise.

"People come with their preconceptions of what 'church' is, and I think we change their minds quickly," Executive Pastor Greg Munck says. "Come experience a place of love and transparency where you can come as you are, not feel judged and learn how to be more Godly."

Life presents everyone with multiple lines to cross. Take a step forward by coming to Crossline — see what your next step could be.

WHO IS CROSSLINE?

Meet some of the staff who make it all happen

KENNY LUCK

Kenny Luck is the leadership pastor at Crossline. He is a husband, father, speaker and award-winning author of several books, including "RISK," "DREAM" and "SOAR." Luck is the former men's pastor at Saddleback Church in Lake Forest, where he and his team motivated more than 7,000 men to participate in small groups and ministries.

RICK BRAEUTIGAM

Since giving his life to Christ at Crossline in 2005, Director of Facilities Rick Braeutigam has been dedicated to serving the church. Rick takes his calling to heart and not only started the Crossline Food Pantry, but also consistently leads Crossline's volunteer outreach efforts in Haiti and Mexico. He has also participated in mission trips to Israel and Mexico.

LORI MARSHALL

Lori Marshall has been at Crossline since its humble origins as a group of friends huddled in a living room. Marshall says having the opportunity to be a part of the church's growth has been like having a front seat to watching God work. Today Marshall serves as the director of adult ministries and care — overseeing women's ministries, community groups and care ministries.
